Improving Outcomes: The Results-Based Accountability Approach

Monday 8th October 2007

CoSLA Conference Centre, Edinburgh, EH12 5XZ

We want to have an outcomes focus to our performance management but the evidence is, nationally, we're finding this very difficult to reach"

- Bernadette Docherty in her Presidential address to the 2007 ADSW Conference

Although it is generally accepted that indicators related to outcomes are more meaningful than those related to outputs, activities or inputs, outcome indicators also tend to be harder to measure and as a result, they are often put on the "too difficult" pile.

One way of addressing this is through a 'results (outcome) based accountability' approach. Outcomes - based practice is a disciplined way of thinking and taking action that can be used to improve the quality of life for people and communities and to improve the performance programmes of services and agencies.

The purpose of this seminar is to:

- Look at the context in which the outcome agenda is developing in Scotland, for example a new National Performance Framework
- Examine existing practice as identified by key agencies such as SWIA and the Care Commission
- Help participants to use an outcome focussed approach to improving their services and ultimately the lives of service users.
- Define some of the challenges and opportunities ahead

There will be an interactive session that will illustrate the concept of 'turning the curve' which participants can replicate in their local areas.
