

Integration and Funding

Wednesday 18th June 2014.

Room TW2 9.04, Tower 3, LSE

The NHS faces a combined care and cash crisis that threatens to debilitate the wider public sector and economy. On present plans, the NHS faces a shortfall of at least £30 billion a year within a decade and possibly a deficit as high as £50 billion.

The report 'Solving the NHS care and cash crisis' by Lord Warner and Jack O'Sullivan proposes a service that would be more affordable without the need for another massive organisational upheaval.

It would lead to the emergence of a new 'National Health and Care Service' (NHCS), whose guiding principle would be "to promote and secure the health and wellbeing of the population, and individuals within it, by securing best value from the resources available." The NHCS would focus on four key areas:

- New co-production partnership between the NHS and individuals (and their carers)
- Integration of health and social care budgets and services at all levels for personalised whole-person care
- Developing a more community-based health and care service
- Consolidation of hospital specialist services

This event is one strand of a "Big Conversation" that is needed with key stakeholders and the public about the changes that need to be made in order to help increase understanding of the case for radical change and to build cross-party support for sustainable change.

Participants will hear from Lord Warner and Jack O'Sullivan and have the opportunity to question and discuss the proposals in their paper alongside invited sector leaders.

There will also be presentations from some of the Integrated Care Pioneers who will discuss how funding and integration is working in practice

This event has been organised by the Social Services Research Group (SSRG) and the National Institute for Health Research School for Social Care Research (NIHR SSCR)

SSRG was established in 1972 by like-minded professionals working in social care, health and academia as a network to share information and good practice.

More than forty years on, SSRG continues to be run by people who are dedicated to taking these principles forward, and do so as an unpaid add-on to their regular day job
